1. Semester Structure and Planning

- Make it clear to the students that the academic staff, through their professional contacts, can assist in finding a company for a project-based course.

Follow-up: At the orientation meeting in the second semester of the Master's programme in spring, the head of the study board informs the students that they are welcome to contact lecturers, supervisors, and semester coordinators to get recommendations for companies in connection with a project-based course in a company. The semester coordinator for the third semester of the Master's programme receives a copy of the agreements that are made.

2. Project

- A student requests teaching in Piping and Instrumentation Diagrams, either as a mandatory or elective course.

Follow-up: In the 5th semester, students are introduced to Piping and Instrumentation Diagrams (P&ID), and we expect them to have this background by the 9th semester.
